

Tuition Remission Taxability for Graduate Courses

All faculty and staff taking graduate level courses must complete the Tuition Remission Taxability for Graduate Courses Form for each course as part of the registration process. Please see the instructions and information on possible tax implications below. Please do not hesitate to contact Human Resource Services at 802-656-3150 or hrsinfo@uvm.edu with questions.

Section 1: Instructions

1. Complete requested employee and course information and Section 1 by indicating if the graduate level course will be applied toward an undergraduate degree.
 - If the graduate level course will be applied to a bachelor degree program, indicate “yes”, sign the form, and return to hrsinfo@uvm.edu. No supervisor signature is required. Tuition remission benefits received for courses applied towards a bachelor degree program are not considered taxable income.
 - If the course will not be applied to a bachelor degree program, indicate “No” and proceed to Section 2.
2. Complete Section 2 by answering both questions.
 - If “Yes” is indicated for either question in Section 2, the tuition remission benefit for that course will be considered taxable income if you have exceeded the annual graduate tuition remission exempt amount established by the IRS. Sign the form and send it to hrsinfo@uvm.edu. No supervisor signature is required.
 - If “No” is indicated for BOTH questions in Section 2, proceed to Section 3.
3. Complete Section 3 by answering all questions.
 - If “Yes” is indicated for any question in Section 3, the tuition remission benefit for that course will be considered taxable income if you have exceeded the annual graduate tuition remission exempt amount established by the IRS. Both employee and supervisor should sign the form and send it to hrsinfo@uvm.edu.
 - If “No” is indicated for ALL questions in Section 3, then the tuition remission benefit received for that course is not considered taxable income. Both employee and supervisor need to sign the form and send it to hrsinfo@uvm.edu.

Section 2: Important Tax Information for Employees Regarding Graduate Courses

The tuition remission benefit for graduate courses will be included in your income, and appropriate tax withholding will occur, unless the cost of these courses would be deductible to you as a taxpayer as ordinary and necessary business expenses—assuming you had paid directly for such courses with your own funds. Courses applied toward an undergraduate degree are excludable from income and therefore are not subject to tax withholdings under Internal Revenue Code (IRC) Section 117[d].

Educational expenses may be considered “ordinary and necessary”, as set forth in IRC Section 162, only if the education:

- Maintains or improves skills required by you in your current employment,

OR

- Meets the express requirements of your employer, or the requirements of applicable law or regulation, imposed as a condition to the retention of an established employment relationship, status, or rate of compensation,

AND

- Is not part of a program that qualifies you for a new profession or business, or is not necessary to meet minimum educational requirements for qualification for employment.

If these conditions are met for the graduate course you are taking, the tuition remission benefit you receive will be excluded from your income as a “working condition” fringe benefit under IRC Section 132 (a)(3).

If these conditions are not met for the graduate course you are taking, the tuition remission benefit you receive will be included in income and subject to social security tax withholding, as well as Federal and State income tax withholding, if in excess of the annual graduate tuition remission exemption established by the IRS.
